The following state ticket was nominated Lieutenant Governor, John I Arnold, Secretary of State Chas M Strauss, Attorney General, Caleb Cushing, Auditor, J Boyle O'Reilly, Treasurer, D N Skillings

The nomination of Gen Butler was enthusiastically received The resolutions adopted reaffirm and reiterate adherence to the time honored principles of democratic enunciation and acted upon by Jefferson Madison and Jackson, and pledge their best exertions to make them effective in the guidance and government of the nation, condemn and will strenuously endeavor to reform extravagance in state expenditures, unnecessary increase of officers waste of the public domain, which should be reserved for the use of actual settlers, asserts with exceeding shame and sorrow we have seen a President elected by the votes of a minority of the people at an election held in accordance with the provisions of the constitution set aside and people deprived of his services in that high office by a series of most astounding forgeries and perjuries a possibility of the successful existence of which weaken every foundation of the republic We therefore unhesitatingly declare that no man ought to be permitted to hold office who is tainted with fraud and corruption that longer continuance of corrupt s in pow r in the nation and especially in the commonwealth tending to … and … unity and temp … speculation and multiplication of … ed officers many of them unknown to the constitution that the administration of state and municipal affairs should … thoroughly and efficiently reformed, we therefore reproduce the platform for state government as set forth by the democratic party in its convention in 75 a m re extended reference to which is found in the address of our candidate for governor to the citizens who asked him to be a candidate, and in which he pledges himself to undertake to reform all abuses, and deprecate the tendency of legislation growing year by year to place impediments in the way of the free exercise of the rights of suffrage by poor and laboring men Adjourned

Relating to the seizure of Mechanics hall by Butlerites, the facts are as follows About 5 o'clock a m about 150 Butler delegates, headed by Mr McSheedy of Boston, and other ardent Butler men, entered Mechanics hall and proceeded to elect P H Hughes of Boston, chairman, and declaring their intention to remain till the convention was fully organized At 5 50 a. m Mr McSheedy sprang to the platform and nominated Gen Butler for governor, and three cheers were given Speeches followed by McSheedy and many others Many of the harangues were very violent, nearly every delegate declaring he would stay here till forcibly thrown out and another shouted he would vote for Butler in spite of the devil or any has man These remarks were loudly cheered By 8 o'clock … wakel up the situation, and at 8 30 a m, the mayor of Worcester arrived with a posse of 50 officers He appealed to them to disperse and told them if … would go out he would protect them in … their rights A delegate … he … protecting in their rights The mayor intimated that the police of the city should … to clear the hall. When the convention was regularly assembled, J J McDavitt, Butler lieutenant, appeared on the scene and asked the mayor if it was true that he had posted blue coated policemen in the corridors and locked the doors to prevent egress and ingress The mayor said no any one could go out who chose "Can they come in again?" he asked, "No, sir," replied the mayor "Then said Mc Davitt, "we refuse to leave" This declaration was answered with passionate applause When the state central committee fully realized that the Butler faction had control of Mechanics hall, they appointed a committee to see what could be done towards procuring a hall They waited upon Mayor Pratt about ten o'clock this a. m, and informed him of the state of affairs After the mayor went to the hall, he wrote to the committee as follows

Mechanics hall was taken possession of this morning between four and six o'clock, by some disorderly persons, who broke down the entrances thereto, and at 10.45 o clock are now in possession of said hall. I demanded that said persons leave said hall, at the request of the state central committee which they refused to do I am of opinion that said hall cannot be cleared, except by violence and perhaps bloodshed Respectfully yours,

CHAS. B PRATT, Mayor

On receipt of the above the state central committee unanimously voted to adjourn the convention till Wednesday of next week at Faneuil hall in Boston This action was rendered necessary from the fact that Butler's friends had secured all the available hall in Worcester, and leaders also took the ground that after the mob proceedings which have taken place here today they can go before the people and lead the movement that will crush butler At the Bay State House Hon F W Bird addressed the crowd in the vestibule at 11 30, and announced that inasmuch as the mob had taken possession of Mechanics hall, and Worcester's mayor had no authority to remove it, saying that a forcible attempt might result in riot and bloodshed, the speaker gave the decision of the state committee that the democratic state convention held in Faneuil hall, Boston, on the 25th, where an ample police force would be on hand to protect the convention's rights The announcement was received with deafening cheers The crowd then dispersed, and at 11 40 all accredited delegates were admitted to Mechanics hall.

Connecticut Democracy.

NEW HAVEN, CONN, Sept. 17.—The democratic state convention of Connecticut assembled in this city today The platform adopted asserts that the democratic party of Connecticut again pledges itself to the principles which it has invariably adopted and which the major … of the people of the state have repeatedly approved … rigid economy in every department of state and federal government … the times require, … the necessities of the times require, … continued corruptions … federal office … condemns the … by which … received of the choice in the last presidential election, a fraud which … shall not be consummated … Public … shall be received for the … actual … and subsidies of … to … corporations and speculators cease forever … that the constitution of the United States recognizes gold and silver as the standard money …

of the union, and this standard is the most stable basis for the commercial necessities of the world, that the resumption act, so called, was in its inception unwise, uncalled for and not demanded at the time of enaction by those laws of trade which govern with unerring certainty the finances of a country Having confidence in the senators and representatives of the state in congress we unhesitatingly rely upon their integrity and judgment, believing they will be controlled in their action upon the question of resumption by those well known principles which underlie the necessities of commerce and the best interests of the people of this state condemns all repudiation and demands an honest and just payment of the public debt We demand of our senators and representatives in congress earnest efforts to increase our foreign trade with foreign nations by such legislation as will tend to restore our commercial tonnage to its former equality with that of Great Britain thank the democratic house of representatives for their earnest struggling against the republican senate to reduce public expenditures and lighten taxation

"The Leading American Newspaper"

The New York Tribune has long been called the leading American newspaper and it constantly confirms the title by the unexampled enterprise exhibited in all its departments political literary mechanical and business Its political influence is constantly widening and in its literary matter it has no rival By the introduction of new and wonderful machinery which prints and folds ready for the mails 15 000 perfect copies in an hour it produces the Weekly and Semi-Weekly Tribune in the popular sixteen page form (so convenient for reading and for preserving permanently printed from type much larger and clearer than is usual with newspapers at the present day an advantage that every reader of newspapers cannot fail to appreciate

The Weekly Tribune is unrivalled as a newspaper and as a family journal The Semi Weekly is far ahead of all competitors, and where a daily paper is not accessible is the best substitute to be had in the country while the price is the very lowest when quality is considered

Unexampled Premium.

WEBSTER'S $12 UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY FREE

The Tribune will give Webster's Unabridged quarto illustrated Dictionary bound in leather, the latest and best edition, printed in best type the regular $12 edition, sold at that price in all the bookstores), to any one remitting—

$16 for eight one-year subscriptions to The Weekly or

$30 for ten one year subscriptions to the Semi Weekly, or,

$10 for a single five years' subscription in advance to The Weekly or,

$15 for a single five-years' subscription in advance to The Semi Weekly

NO RIVALS TO COMPARE IT WITH

The Weekly or Semi Weekly Tribune is now utterly unlike any other newspaper issued from the office of a daily in New York or in the country—larger, in different and better form, in better type and filled with matter prepared expressly for its readers—not with the stale news dumped in from the daily. It can only be compared with the three and four dollar weeklies like Harper's or the great religious and literary journals while its pages are larger than any of these Its price however remains fixed at such low rates as to defy competition and the extraordinary premiums surpass anything even in its own history

Mr. Hoyt says in yesterday's Tribune, that he did not authorize the publication of Alva Adams' statement.

They call the Democratic party the third party in Maine, because it polled less votes than the greenback party.

The fact that four per cent. bonds are selling so rapidly would seem to show that there is not a great scarcity of money after all

The speech of President Hayes at St. Paul, Minnesota, is having a splendid effect. His facts were more potent than figures of speech.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean says, What have the democrats to crow over in Maine? Have the people of Maine indorsed Andrew Jackson or complimented Jeff Davis?

The treasury department is now paying out silver for greenbacks. This silver is paid back into the treasury for customs duties, and thus we already have practical resumption.

There seems to be a fair prospect of the Butler delegates being in the ascendancy in the Massachusetts democratic state convention. The Boston Transcript says "The "Butler Hawk," as named by the Post, captured lots of democratic chickens, last night, in Boston."

Mr. Bristow has given up his law practice at Louisville and has gone to New York to reside permanently. He intends to devote himself to his profession and let politics alone. We very much regret the action of Mr. Bristow, as he was one of the purest and ablest men in political life.

In another column will be found the closing part of a speech delivered by Hon. James A. Garfield, at Faneuil Hall, Boston. The speech was of great power, and we take pleasure in placing a part of it before our readers. The subject he discussed is by far the most important issue of the campaign.

The interest on the public debt in 1865 was $4.20 per capita. In 1878 it is $1.97 per capita. Still the greenbackers complain of the increase of the bonded debt [illegible] In 1865 the debt per capita was $77.25, while now it is only $41.67. If anyone prefers our financial condition at the close of the war to that of the present, it is because they are unacquainted with the facts of the case.

When General Butler addresses his friends, the workingmen, he appears in a dress coat, white necktie, white silk stockings, low dancing shoes, brilliant diamond ring, button-hole bouquet, &c.

At the request of the United States government the British government has released Condon, the Fenian agitator, who has been confined for eleven years past. At the time congress passed a resolution asking for his release Patterson was conveniently absent.

THE MAINE ELECTION.

The topic for the week has been the Maine election. The result was a surprise to everybody. The returns, according to our latest advices are as follows:

	1877	1878
Republican	53,631	57,000
Greenback	5266	35,000
Democrat	42,114	28,000

It will be seen that the Republicans have more than held their own, while the Democracy has lost about a third of their strength. The strength developed by the greenbackers has been a surprise even to themselves. The Republican party now feel the need of determined action, While they have gained over their vote of 1877, they have lost two representatives by Democratic-Greenback fusion. The leading organs all over the country admit the strength of the greenbackers. This is an encouraging sign. Before their strength was underrated and too little was done to stop the spread of their false ideas. Now that their strength is known and admitted we may expect that the republican party will put forth adequate efforts to stay the spread of these notions. The Maine election has at least done this much it has made the financial issue the issue of 1880.

The most amusing thing about the election is the manner in which democratic organs comment upon it. The result is viewed by them as a victory for the democracy and a Waterloo for the republicans. The New York World and other leading papers, including the Denver News express this idea. The Terre Haute Express, a greenback paper, in commenting on this democratic way of finding comfort in defeat says: "We admire the philosophy of a democratic newspaper which can rejoice over the result in Maine. It is on a par with that of the man who smiled a heavenly sort of a smile when he had driven his team to the top of a long hill and found that the tail-board of his wagon had slipped, and his load of potatoes was strewn on the road for a quarter of a mile.

The Richmond Dispatch is an exception among democratic organs and says with considerable sense, "In Maine and Vermont the democrats have found that their coquetting with Greenbackers has yielded no good fruit to them. It is evident that the greenback following in those states has been drawn from the democratic party more than from the republicans. It is but a just retribution that directs the loss upon the democrats in those states. The irredeemable greenback craze in the land is, as far as the politicians are concerned, unscrupulous and mercenary." We are of the opinion that the democracy throughout the west will have the same experience as the Dispatch states the democracy of Vermont and Maine has had.

Garfield in Faneuil Hall.

We come back to the primary question of this fight. I affirm against all opposers on this subject, that the highest and foremost present duty of the American people is to complete the resumption of specie payments. [Great applause and cheers.] And first of all, because the solemn and sacred faith of this republic is pledged to resumption. [Applause.] And if it were never so hard to do it, if the burdens were ten times greater than they are, this nation dare not look in the face of God and man, and break its plighted word. [Loud applause.] It is a fearful thing for one man to stand up in the face of his brother men and refuse to keep his pledge, and it is forty-five million times worse for a nation to do it. [Applause.] It breaks the main spring of faith, it unsettles all security, it disturbs all values and makes the life of the nation a peril in all time to come. If we should break our faith now, who would ever trust the republic again in an hour of danger? If we break our faith now, we don't deserve to be saved when we are again in peril. [Great applause.]

I am almost ashamed to give another reason for resumption than this one I have given. It is so great, so complete, that no other is needed; but there is another reason almost as strong. If there were no moral obligation in the case, if there were no public faith pledged to it, I affirm that the resumption of specie payments is demanded by every interest of business in this country [great applause], and so imperatively demanded that it can be demonstrated that every known interest in America will be strengthened and bettered by the resumption of specie payments. [Applause.] Fellow-citizens, those who oppose it undertake to direct us by saying that the resumption of specie payments will help the rich and hurt the poor. I deny the allegation. Resumption of specie payments will help all, but I affirm that it will especially and in a great measure, far greater than any other, help the laboring people of the United States. [Prolonged applause.] How? Let us see how. In rising from the old coin standard, or falling rather from it as we did till our dollars were worth but thirty-eight cents, all prices were increased, but they were not all increased alike. First, the commodities of common trade went up in [illegible] went up in price, and, according to universal law, the price of labor went up last. It was the last to rise. [A voice, "Come down first." Applause and laughter.] And when when it did rise it didn't rise so high as the cost of living rose, and in the wildest days of inflation we knew, when the increase of wages was fifty per cent. the increase of the cost of living was seventy-five per cent. So that inflation, though it increased the nominal price of the laborer's wages, still greater increased the cost of living. It offered him more, but in fact gave him less. That is what inflation did. And now some one in the audience anticipated me, and wisely. When labor comes down it comes down among the first. This is true. An uncertain currency that goes up and down, hits the laborer both ways. [Prolonged applause.] It helps him last and hurts him first. [Applause.]. And therefore, of all men in America, the man who ought to demand the resumption of specie payments, and the fixing and making certain our standard value, is the laboring man who can only suffer when the standard is departed from. [Great applause.] The capitalist can take advantage of the market. If he has anything to buy, he not compelled to buy it all to-day; he can wait till the market price is low, and buy to an advantage. If he has something to sell, he is not compelled to sell it to-day; he can wait till the price is up, and sell it at the best. Not so the laboring man. He goes out into the markets of the world with just one thing to sell, and that is this day's work. The work of his own muscles that he can to-day he must sell to-day, and at the price of to-day, or it is forever lost. [Applause.] What he needs to buy he must buy now, when necessity compels him. He, therefore, can not, like the capitalist, dodge the difficulties of inflation and contraction, of the ups and downs of the standard of value, but they strike him both ways, and strike him hard. [Applause.] What, therefore, the laboring man needs is this: When he has earned his money he shall get it in a currency that will keep over night. [Tremendous applause and cheers.]

Resumption, therefore, means that your currency shall be made better, better and better, till your dollar is as good as the best dollar in the world, and there stop. [Applause.] We fought this great war to make all men equal before the law. [Applause.] We fight this battle of finance to make all our dollars equal before the law, [applause], whether they be silver or gold or paper. We believe in a foot that measures just twelve inches, no less, no more, [applause]; a pound that weighs just sixteen ounces avoirdupois, no less, no more; and a dollar, of whatever it be made, that is worth either as evidence of debt or as a reality, just one hundred cents, no less, no more. [Applause.] We have $1,100,000,000 of trade with the Old World, and every dollar of that trade is measured by the standard of coin. We want a dollar so good that it will measure all that and be as good as a dollar is across the water. General Butler says in a paper I have read [laughter and hisses and a voice: "Read it,"] that they want a dollar that shall be non-exportable. I have read it. Several men wanted a dollar that was non-exportable several years ago. It was said in congress in praise of our irredeemable greenbacks that we had a dollar that would stay by us. [Laughter.] A dollar that was not a coward, like gold and silver, that fled the country when the country was in danger, and that we had a dollar that would stay by us.

You wanted a non-exportable dollar, you greenback men. [Voice "Yes."] Let us see, you want all its blessings, and find it is like the citizen of the town in Germany who moved that a gibbet be restricted to the citizens of the town. [Laughter and applause.] Do you know where the idea of a non-exportable currency came from? [Voice "Lowell." Applause and laughter.] Further off than that. I will read you the very sentence from a book written by John Law two hundred years ago, when he started the Mississippi scheme that blasted France for a quarter of a century. Non-exportable currency? There are other than currency non-exportable damaged flour, [applause], spoiled cotton, rancid butter and addled eggs. They are non-exportable. [Applause and laughter.] Our currency has been non-exportable for similar reasons, so bad and so uncertain that no nation under heaven would take it unless compelled by law. No, gentlemen, we want a currency that can walk, like an American, all over the world. [Applause.]

A little while ago some one asked me how about the national banks, and I have just arrived at that topic and ask your attention to it. A little more difficult question is discovered there. [Laughter, and a voice, "Ah!"] Like Senator Thurman and many leading democrats in the West, they confine themselves chiefly to demanding the abolition of the national banks, and to issue the $324,000,000 of greenbacks to take the place of these notes. Now, it is a debatable proposition, and you are reasonable men. Let us debate it. If it were just as well to do that, I would be in favor of it. If it were better to do that, I would still more strongly favor it. Now, what are the objections, if there are any? Let us state them and consider them. My first objection to that proposition is that it is a violation of the plighted promise and faith of this nation, that it will never increase the greenbacks above four hundred millions. If you do that thing you increase them to six hundred and seventy millions. [A voice, "Too thin!"] Is good faith too thin for you? [Applause and laughter.] You are too thin for an able-bodied, honest man. [Applause.] Suppose that trouble to be got over, suppose there were no obstacles in the way of the public faith, I have another objection to it. If you issue three hundred and twenty-four millions more of greenbacks on the top of the three hundred and forty-six millions now out, you make redemption impossible; and all who believe in the resumption of specie payments ought to be opposed to it for that reason. Now, why do I say that? The United States can now resume specie payments on the promised day. [Applause.] It can do it sooner. In 1875 we were told we could not resume, that we could not get the gold to resume, that the moment we tried to accumulate the coin it would increase the value of the coin and decrease the value of the greenback. But in the face of all Cassandra prophesies we have accumulated, and have to-day in the treasury of the United States, unpledged for any other purpose, one hundred and thirty-five millions of coin, waiting to secure the resumption or redemption of our greenbacks. [A voice, "Losing interest on that."] Certainly. It costs something to be honest. [Loud applause and three cheers for Garfield.] In the next place, while [illegible] value of our greenback has been going up constantly from thirteen per cent. discount, when the law was passed, till to-day, in the markets of America, our greenback is worth ninety-nine and three-fourth cents on a dollar. [Applause.] What coin we have will certainly do enough to complete that work, and if it were not, we can readily accumulate, under the law, five millions a month more on top of that, till the day of resumption comes. So that we are perfectly able to resume under the law as it now stands. Now there are the national bank notes, 324 millions of them out. They are compelled to march abreast of us in the work of the resumption of specie payments. The two thousand national banks are all harnessed to the car of resumption, and when we resume they must resume. I am glad they are to help ahead that work. If you abolish them you take away their help, and you put the whole load of 670 millions upon the treasury and you break it down. [Applause.]

Now, there is another objection that I have to abolishing the National banks and substituting greenbacks. We have the National banks in a shape where they pay a good share of taxes, and I am glad of it. They ought to pay. [Applause.] Since their organization they have paid over two hundred millions taxes to the state and nation. Last year they paid sixteen millions of dollars in taxes, nine to the states and seven to the nation. Their stock is taxed by the states; their circulation is taxed by the nation; their deposits are taxed by the nation, and the man that holds his money in National bank notes on the day of assessment is taxed on his surplus cash that he holds. How is it with the greenbacks? They are not taxed. There are already $346,000,000 of paper money in this country that escapes taxation altogether. The rich men can gather them to their hands on the day of assessment, and escape taxes altogether by doing it. Now, the substitution you talk of will lose us seventeen millions a year to the states and federal treasuries, and would take three hundred and twenty-four millions more of paper out of the reach of taxation—a thing fairly to be complained of, and I object to it for that reason.

Another objection is, that the National bank note is the only portion of our financial machinery that gears the supply of currency on to the laws of demand and supply. It is a self-adjusting method of the country, with a sufficient amount of currency. No man is wise enough to tell how much we need, and if men were wise enough, dare you trust it to a partisan house of representatives?

Suppose another thing, fellow-citizens. If you abolish the national bank system, you leave it to the mercy of brokers. The banking business of America is necessyry to its real prosperity. Do you know that one of the modern devices for avoiding the use of a large amount of money is a bank? What portion of the business of this country is carried on in natural money? In England it is only five per cent. Ninety-five per cent. is by drafts, checks and commercial bills. In this country not less than ninety per cent. is carried on by the different banks. Our present system is secured in its circulation and under the complete control of the law, and it would be a great misfortune to go back to the old system which prevailed before the war. Then if a man wished to take any paper money, he used to study the bank note reports. If a merchant in the west wished to come east to trade, he was obliged to sort his notes before he started. Money from any state would not circulate in more than half of the states in the Union. How many men in this audience have taken out their pocket-books in the last six months to see what bank their bills were on? You don't care for the bank under the national system. You know that behind every bill is one hundred cents locked up in the treasury of the United States to secure you against loss. You don't care if the bank is broken, burned up, or if a hundred pounds of nitro-glycerine tear the bank building to atoms. The value of your bill is the same. We propose to fight the battle out against the cry for more greenback currency, but we propose to fight it on the square issue of justice and good sense. [Enthusiastic applause.

Now, another point I want to make, fellow-citizens, is that resumption is so near that it would be a crime to stop. We are almost on the shore. We have been tossed these many long years in the storm of paper money. It has hampered our industries, shaken our confidence, robbed our poor men, ruined our manufacturers. It has given the opportunity for all this wicked and wretched business of gambling in gold. Resumption of specie payments ends gold gambling forever, for it rests only on the difference between paper and gold. Now we are almost out of the tempest. One good, bold stroke and our feet will stand upon the rock; and the enemies of resumption would now plunge us back into the shoreless and bottomless sea. In the name of the public peace, in the prospect of returning prosperity, in the name of the sufferings of the past, the republican party demands that the work of resumption shall not be hindered. Nothing can now hinder it but a violation of the law.

Now, fellow-citizens, I have detained you long on these topics, but there is one other phase. We have passed through a long period of darkness, but in that darkness there has been some compensation. Men tell us there were good times in 1865 and on till 1870. Were there? What has happened in those years? In 1866-73 this country was running in debt at a rate never known before. I do not mean the nation as a government, but the nation as a people. Do you know that in our trade with Europe we bought 1,047 millions more in merchandise from Europe than we sent back to pay for it? Our individuals ran in debt more than a thousand million dollars abroad. They were also running in debt at home. It was the result of the speculation which inflation always brings. Everything rested upon credit. We were expanding municipal credit, and were enlarging individual credits everywhere. The personal and corporation far outweighed the national. But since the calamity of 1873 struck us we have been quietly and determinedly paying our debts. In the last five years we have sold abroad more than 500 millions more than we have bought abroad. We are paying our debts. We are clearing away our wrecks. We are getting the business of this country on its feet, and now it only fears that the black shadow of Congress may blast it. [Applause.] We want it to stand away from us. Old Diogenes was right when he told Alexander that all that he wanted was that he should stand out of his sunlight. Let no, the shadow destroy the returning confidence. Some say that we have made the hard times by contraction. I deny it. It is false in theory and in fact. [Voice. "Prove it, prove it."] I will prove it. [Applause.] On the first day of September, 1873, there was more paper currency afloat in this country than at any other time for six years. The panic struck us when we were at full tide of our paper volume. [Applause at the quick proof.]

Now let me call your attention to another phase of this matter. I have been speaking a long time on the dry facts of financial science. We have reached a period when these questions have become of deep popular interest. If the people of the United States will hear and discuss the subject you can always appeal to their intelligence and conscience. Mr. Garfield at this point introduced the subject of the letter of Lord Macaulay, in 1857, expressing his fear that America would suffer terribly from popular agitation in the future when the population should be as dense as in England, and could be saved only by a Cæsar or a Bonaparte, who would become dictator and save the social organization only at the expense of law, or society and law would together fall in a common ruin. The impressive reasoning of Lord Macaulay combined with the serious manner of Mr. Garfield, sobered the demonstrative audience decidedly. As the letter in question has been published in the papers recently, considerations of space make its insertion here inexpedient. Mr. Garfield decidedly combatted Lord Macaulay's conclusions, because, while the danger was great, he did not understand the spirit of a people living under free institutions and their devotion to social order and quiet. The speaker made an effective and logical point against Ladd, the Maine Greenbacker elected Monday to Congress, by quoting that the tramp was better than the wealthy man for society, and the hall fairly shook with the applause of the forcible opinion that, in reference to Macaulay's letter, "the bloody track of the Commune shall never have a pathway on our shores." Certainly in the audience there was little sympathy for the Denis Kearney platform. Then, approaching the end of the address, he continued: "We know that all honest men ask a fair, honest, truthful discussion of the subject. We believe that Americans everywhere will respond to the right when they know the right. To the men who are misguided, or who have left our party or any other to fight against sound currency, our advice is in the words of the telegram of Mr. Cox to Mr. Hewitt in the published doings of the presidential negotiations of 1876: "Reverse your error and resume your judgment." Mr. Garfield then closed with thanks to the audience for their attention. When he ceased, three cheers were called for and given heartily, and they were repeated. The speech lasted nearly two hours, and held the audience closely to the end.
Conclusion of Gen. Garfield's speech, Sept. 10th.

W. B. Norton has lost a mare and colt. See notice.

A mail car has been placed on the Denver & South Park railroad.

There is over half a million pounds of freight at the D. & R. G. depot, awaiting transhipment to Leadville.

While Mr. Shields was descending a ladder on Monday, the ladder broke, precipitating him to the ground. Some painful bruises were sustained.

Postmaster Potter has kindly furnished the prisoners of the county jail a liberal supply of reading matter, for which they return thanks through the GAZETTE.

We omitted to mention yesterday the collection at the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening for the benefit of the yellow fever sufferers. It amounted to $30.75.

Thomas Wanless has on exhibition at Howbert & Co.'s book store pictures of himself, wife, three children and sister-in-law. The work is well done, and no doubt the pictures will be highly prized by the family.

Mr. Huddleston began the job of delivering the water pipes yesterday morning. He is to complete it within thirty days. His compensation is one dollar per ton for pipe and fixtures delivered beyond the reservoir, and fifty cents for all deliveries this side.

We are informed that a dead horse in the south end of town need attention in the matter of interment. A peculiarity of the affair is that the defunct animal is in a standing position in the ditch near the D. & R. G. track above Theodore Brown's residence. Who has lost a bay horse?

Judge Decker, who is to address the republican club of this city next Saturday night, is reported by the Denver Tribune as delivering "earnest, logical and convincing" speeches in the northern part of this state. It is to be hoped that the citizens of this place will turn out en masse and give him a warm reception.

Major McAllister has been invited by the Republican State Central Committee to stump that part of the state where the Greenbackers are strongest. This is a decided compliment as only the ablest and best-informed speakers are sent into these districts. His able speech of last Saturday made a deep impression. We are sure that the facts he then presented will do a great deal of good among honest, thoughtful greenbackers.

The fall term of Colorado College begins to-day at nine o'clock. All those intending to enter are requested to present themselves at that time. In addition to the instructors named in the circular, a lady teacher has been secured and is expected to arrive to-day. She comes here with the highest of testimonials as a competent teacher from the seminary at Lake Forest near Chicago.

With this issue of the GAZETTE, we present the advertisement of Messrs. E. P. Howbert & Co., successors to James Duncan. The principal in this new firm, Mr. E. P. Howbert, brings with him a large experience in the book and news business. The "Co." is Frank Howbert, at present an assistant in the postoffice, who will give place in that establishment to his brother about the first of next month, and will then devote his entire attention to the store. The new firm deserves success, and doubtless will achieve it.

Since the 28th of June the St. Louis Smelting and Refining Company has shipped 1,689,000 pounds of ore, and 460,-252 pounds of bullion. The receipts of this company last week were 2139 sacks ore, and 358 pigs base bullion. Their shipments for the same time were 1,225 sacks ore to the works in St. Louis, and [illegible] pounds coke, and 111,000 pounds merchandise to Leadville. The shipments in the grain department aggregated during the week 100,000 pounds with 250,000 pounds still awaiting transportation. Three [illegible] bags of ore were received by the company on Sunday and Monday [illegible]. These figures indicate the amount of business transacted by only one firm, [illegible] are sufficient to give some idea of the amount of mountain freight business done at this point.

THE RACES.

Second Day's Proceedings.

"Empress" Takes the 2.50 and "Jett" the Three Minute Races.

Good Attendance and Considerable Sport.

As regards weather and track, the second day of the meeting was the counterpart of the day previous. There was a notable increase in the attendance, which may be accounted for by the fact that the programme was a most excellent one, from which much sport was anticipated. We were fortunate in receiving an invitation to a sea behind Messrs. Wilbur & Goodrich's trotter, "Luke," and in company with Mr. Wilbur were whirled along to the race course at a lively pace. Upon reaching the track, at precisely two o'clock, we found the judges in their places, and shortly after the first race was announced, namely, the

2.50 TROTTING RACE.

This race had been postponed from the previous day, and consequently took the first place on the programme. The entries were as follows:

"Empress," entered by Geo. Wolff; "Colorado," entered by Wilbur & Goodrich, and "Blind Tom," entered by M. J. Dunn. The latter horse, however, was drawn, and upon positions being drawn, "Colorado" won the pole.

First Heat. They received the word on first scoring, "Colorado" taking the lead, with the mare lapping him well. Before reaching the quarter pole, "Empress" made a slight break, another on nearing the turn, and still another on the home stretch. "Colorado" lay down to his work in fine style, passing under the wire at least half a length ahead of the mare. Time 2:54¼.

Second Heat. They again received the word on first scoring, "Empress" leading by half a length. Just after passing the quarter, "Colorado" indulged in a slight break, but was quickly brought to his feet by his driver. At this time the mare led him by several lengths, but getting down to his work, by the time the ¾ pole was reached had closed the gap to within a length. They came down the home stretch in good style, the mare winning the heat by half a length. Time 2:51½.

Third Heat. A good start on first scoring, the mare leading by a [illegible]. They held these positions throughout, the mare winning the heat in 2.59.

Fourth Heat. For the fourth time they got the word on first scoring and kept their positions well, the mare leading from the [illegible], "Empress" taking the heat in 2.51½, and thus winning the race.

Below we give the

SUMMARY.

Empress,	2	1	1	1
Colorado,	1	2	2	2

The next race called was the

THREE MINUTE RACE.

For this race four entries had been made namely, the blk. g. "Jett," entered by Joel Roe; chst. s. "Luke," entered by Wilbur & Goodrich; b. s. "Wm. Edwards," entered by Geo. Wolff, and bro. g. "Blind Tom," entered by M. J. Dunn. Positions were drawn and assigned the horses in the following order: "Jett" first; "Luke" second; "Wm. Edwards" third; and "Blind Tom" outside.

First Heat. They got the word on third scoring, "Jett" leading, with "Luke" second, "Blind Tom" third, and "Wm. Edwards" bringing up the rear. Before reaching the quarter they strung out considerably. After making a bad break "Edwards" changed places with "Blind Tom" passing under the wire in this order. "Luke" lapping the black well up. Time 2.58.

Second Heat. They started in the same order as before, "Jett" leading, with "Luke" close on to him. On reaching the distance pole, "Luke" and "Jett" both broke, the black losing just enough to give "Luke" the heat by less than half a length. Time, 2:55.

Third Heat.—"Blind Tom" having been drawn, the three others started on second scoring, "Jett" leading by half a length over "Luke," "Edwards" third. There was nothing conspicuous in this heat, "Jett" winning the heat in 2:55.

Fourth Heat. "Wm. Edwards" was drawn after the third heat, the others getting the word on the fourth scoring, "Jett" having the lead, and keeping it throughout, winning the heat and the race. Time, 2:55¾. Below we give the

SUMMARY:

Jett,	1	2	1	1
Luke,	2	1	2	2
Wm. Edwards,	3	3	3		drawn.
Blind Tom,	4	4			drawn.

Following this race, came the unfinished running race, half mile heats, best two in three. "Ramble" having been drawn, the contest lay between "Etty C." and "Tempest." They were started on second scoring; "Etty C." having the lead, holding the same to the last, and winning the heat in 56s. Having won a heat the day previous this gave her the race.

The next on the programme was the

TWO MILE RUNNING DASH.

This was between Thornhill's "Maria Grey" and Waldron's "Ranchman," "Minnie Hunt" having been drawn. They got a good start, the mare taking the lead and holding it without much effort. The first mile was made 2:04; the second and the race in 4:04, by "Maria Grey."

Next came the foot race of one hundred yards. The contestants were Clein Stockbridge and J. McCall. The latter won in twelve seconds.

It having been announced that owing to the lateness of the hour, the "free for all" race would be postponed, a half mile dash was made up between Fisher's "Bessie," Head's "Joricks," Hall's "Prince" and Miss Tully's "Frank." Prince won the race by several lengths 54 seconds.

Taken throughout the meeting was a very enjoyable one, everything passing off in the smoothest manner. The postponement of the "free to all" races was of course a disappointment but the managers taking this into consideration have decided to allow the pacers "Belle Colorado" and "Sleepy Tom" to enter with the same privileges as trotters. This will of course make the race of unusual interest and will, without doubt, call out a large crowd. Aside from the "free for all" race there will be a half mile race, best 2 in 3, for a stake of $50.00. This race will be open to all ponies of 14½ hands and under. The entries are "Blucher," entered by G. W. Jones; "Coal Deck," entered by Geo. Talbot, and "Sleepy Dick," by Mr. Wilson. The managers have placed the admittance fee at the low sum of twenty-five cents which should not fail to draw a full attendance. The races will be called promptly at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Personal.

J. J. Judson, with the R. M. T. Co., is stopping at the National.

The postmaster general will be in Denver one day this week.

A little child of Eugene Roberts died at Colorado City on Monday night.

J. R. Reniff, esq., of the Chicago & Alton railroad, is stopping at the Springs hotel.

John Culver arrived yesterday from Alamosa, where he has been ranching and roughing it.

Capt. C. B. Ruston of Omaha smelting and refining works, went south on the Leadville express.

Dr. A. G. Smith, a noted physician in Geneva, N. Y., is registered at the Colorado Springs hotel.

Hon. Thomas G. Hillhouse, chief of the sub-treasury in New York, is at the Colorado Springs hotel.

F. E. Meyers, passenger agent of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad, is at the National.

Gen. Hatch, who has been stopping with host Barker of the Manitou House, has gone to his headquarters at Fort Garland.

Paul Vandervoort, chief clerk R. M. S., will go south through this city in a day or two, looking after the interests of the mail service.

Hon. J. C. Helm and Major Henry McAllister addressed the people at Monument last night on the political issues of the day.

C. E. Borden, secretary of the Colorado Live Stock Association, together with his family and brother, D. W. Borden, left for their home in New York city yesterday morning. Mr. C. E. Borden thinks of returning in a few months.

Lieut. J. C. Pearce returned on Monday from Cresta Buttes, Elk mountains. He reports that the company of which J. C. Robinson is manager is progressing finely with their works at Cresta Buttes. Mr. Robinson will return in a few weeks.

General Nathan Harris will start in a few days for the southern part of the county to canvass it for the independent candidate. He has already invited Alderman Woodgate to accompany him. Invitations to other active politicians have been extended by the General, who does nothing by halves. He intends to make a few stirring speeches and show the people that he is the man preeminently fitted to represent them. He will use Webster's dictionary.

A Few Notes on a Trip to the Seven Lakes Park.

Induced by the glowing description given by Mr. H. S. Grant of the beauties, comforts and enjoyments of the Seven Lakes Park we started on Saturday morning last in his company for that favored spot. It is not our intention to give any detailed account of our trip, but simply to state what we experienced and learned that will be of value to any who wish to spend a few days in the mountains.

The Park has already been twice described in our columns and it is sufficient to say that it is four miles south and two miles east of Pike's Peak, is at an elevation of about 10,500 feet, and is wholly inclosed by high mountains. The climate is very mild. During the two days we were there we did not use an overcoat. On Monday morning at 8 o'clock the thermometer on the sunny side of the house showed the temperature to be 75°. We noticed very little difference between the temperature of this place and Colorado Springs. We understand that with the exception of an occasional storm the climate is as mild through September and October as it was while we were there.

The Park is owned by Messrs. King & Welch. Mr. King first discovered the lakes in 1872 and was so well pleased with them that he has resided there during a portion of every year since then. He has had various partners in his claims but has been associated with Mr. Welch since 1876. In the fall of that year they commenced to get out the timber for the spacious log cabin. This cabin is now nearly completed and is a monument of their pluck and patience. The main building two stories high, is 42x22 and the L 20x16. All the lumber used in its construction with the exception of the doors and sash has been cut by them from the forest. The boards have all been cut by a whip saw from logs. The amount of labor performed by Messrs. King and Welch has been immense. The building is now covered, and sufficient rooms have been furnished for at least ten guests. The walls of the building are unfinished on the inside and present a very attractive if rough appearance. The building will have all the essential comforts of a home, and yet has the characteristics of a log cabin, a happy combination for the tourist who wants to "rough" it without experiencing any discomforts. The table fare is good and substantial. An abundance and variety of game plays no unimportant part in the bill of fare. Mrs. Welch and daughter presided over the culinary department in a very satisfactory manner.

The lakes at present are not stocked with fish, but will be soon. The hunting is very good for small game. Grouse, rabbits and ducks can usually be easily found. We saw a great many deer beds in the various parks about there, and abundant evidence of larger game. In October there will be bison, bear, and deer in abundance. The party of which we happened to be a member was the only party of four different ones that failed to bring in grouse. We saw abundant evidence of the presence of game but were not fortunate.

The country about Seven Lakes Park is beautiful, and possesses many attractions for the tramp. Dozens of beautiful parks are nestled among the hills within a few miles of the Seven Lakes. We had the pleasure of visiting several of these which Mr. King stated had not been seen by over a dozen people, at least since 1872. It seemed strange that within a few miles of Colorado Springs there should be so many beautiful and accessible spots which are not even visited by those who have resided here for years. In fact we were so much fascinated by some of these parks that we have almost decided to preempt one.

If one likes climbing mountains, Bald mountain is close at hand. It is 12,500 feet high, and is the highest in the range except Pike's Peak. From its summit a magnificent view of Colorado Springs, the green plains and the various mountain ranges on every side, stretching away as far as the Uncompahgre range on the southwest can be had.

A large variety of ferns and flowers can always be found even on the summit amid the huge boulders. We ascended the mountain and were present at the raising of a large flag made of canvas and appropriately inscribed. The flag may be easily seen with a glass from Colorado Springs. The ascension of Pike's Peak is now a common affair and lacks the romance it once had, but Bald mountain has been ascended by only three ladies, Mrs. Welch, Miss Welch, and Mrs. Dr. Edwords, and by about fifteen other persons. Its ascension therefore satisfies the desire which most people have of doing something which very few or no persons have done before. Very near the summit of the mountain is the bed of a large lake where valuable specimens may be found.

We have thus briefly indicated some of the sources of enjoyment in this beautiful park and will simply add that we know of no place in the mountains where the hunter, tourist or invalid can pass a few days or weeks more pleasantly. Messrs. King and Welch are known too well in this community to make it necessary for us to add any words of commendation in regard to them.

We went to the Park on Marsh & Son's burros in six hours, and returned on them in four hours. We find this popular method of mountain travel both safe and easy. Our time on our return was as good as that usually made by the best ponies. The King and Welch trail leading from the government trail about one-half mile this side of the Lake House, is in a very good condition. The Cheyenne toll road has been built to within four miles of the Seven Lakes Park; and there is some prospect of its being finished to that point within a year. If this is done the Park will be accessible with a carriage.

Both in ascending and descending we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Jones the proprietor of Jones' Park. Unfortunately we did not have time to accept his courteous invitation to visit his beautiful place. We cannot forbear in closing these few cursory notes on a very pleasant trip to acknowledge the many courtesies we received from Mr. Grant and Sergeant Choate, the latter of whom we were fortunate enough to have in our company both ways.
